

Cooperatives in farming or agriculture is where farmers pool their resources in certain areas of activity. The main type of agricultural cooperatives are focused on supplying their members with inputs for agricultural production (seeds, fertilizer, fuel, machinery services) as well as help with the transformation, packaging, distribution, and marketing of farm products. They are user driven businesses, meaning that the farmers themselves determine how supportive the cooperatives actually are.